PERSONAL AND SOCIETY.

[All society and personal notes for the Sunday issue of the Journal, to secure publication, must be sent to the city editor by Saturday noon.]

There has been a great variety of entertainments during the past week, including concerts, dinners, lunches, dances, receptions, weddings, a garden party, buckboard rides, progressive euchre parties, coffees, and musicales. Among these were the party of the Children's Dancing Club, the garden party of Mrs. J. F. Pratt for Miss Bybee and Mr. Milliken, Mrs. L. W. Fletcher's Wednesday afternoon reception, buckboard rides to Mrs. Hope's, card parties by Mr. and Mrs. Drew, Major and Mrs. W. J. Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Major Taylor, and the Budd-Winship and Chace-Tinney

There is an entertaining epidemic on hand, and those who have not entertained recently are making plans to have something. Of course, if every person tries to cancel all their obligations by giving companies, that only complicates matters, for every invitation issued only puts the person to whom it is sent under obligations to the sender. Some people who have been sending out cards have not stopped at the foot of their own lists, but encroached upon those of others of their friends, and have invited people to their entertainments whom they do not know, not even by sight. It's all very well to have a distinguished gathering of ladies and gentlemen. A list, of well-known society people reads well in the press accounts; but how these same people talk, who are invited, but have not the pleasure of the acquaintance of their would-be hostess, is quite a different matter, and would not read well in print. There are times when an invitation to a person or couple, whom the hostess has met, but has not called on, is a compliment—especially if the guests are new-comers to the city. The hostesses, or host and hostess, if both are inviting, should then inclose the visiting card with the invitation; but that sort of a case is not what has caused all the comment that is abroad in the land. A hostess who wished to give a large reception, and whose those of others of their friends, and have to give a large reception, and whose acquaintance was limited, made out her list, writing first the names of all her acquaintances, and then filling out with the names of some two hundred persons, whose names were easily obtained, either by political, business or social prominence. The addresses were found in the directory and the invitations sent out. Why this spread of invitations, no one knows. The lady no doubt expects to enlarge her acquaintanceship, and wishes to have her house visitors heliave she is in society and has a great ship, and wishes to have her house visitors believe she is in society and has a great many friends. The way her last invitations were received by those not acquainted with her varied. Some were flattered by the attention, others thought it impudence, others said they would go just to see what the hostess would do and have; others hastened to send regrets, while others, still, thought it not necessary even to send regrets. The issuing of cards to persons who are not on the visiting list has been quite general, that is, at nearly every been quite general, that is, at nearly every entertainment of any size. Persons have been encountered who say they have never called on the hostess, but that she had invited them to her company, and they had accepted. To give a large reception and have two-thirds of the invitations sent to strangers is something peculiar, to say the least.
